WONDERGLASS

Joana Vasconcelos's Crochet Paintings series (2010-) is an ongoing meditation on the richness of craft, the handiwork of generations. With particular reference to the gendered traditions of crochet – an activity commonly passed down from mother to daughter – Vasconcelos brings publicity to the otherwise intimate and private domesticity of this engagement. In so doing, she pays homage to these transgenerational stitches through time. Appearing here alongside blown glass forms, Interaction conflates the material differences of soft yielding yarns and firm ultra-gloss glass, while also drawing attention to the shared intergenerational custodianship of artisanal culture.
